Program Overview

There are so many things to think about when trying to anticipate the worst:

How do you prepare for a disaster?

How do you start to put together a plan?

What should be included in a plan?

How might preparations differ for a major disaster -- like a hurricane -- that you know in advance is coming vs an unexpected event-- like the recent tornadoes -- that strikes out of the blue?

How do needs and resources vary depending upon the type of disaster?

What should you expect in terms of support from outside agencies and companies?

These and other important issues will be addressed by Steve Kass, Public Information Officer of the Rhode Island Emergency Management Agency and Brian McGuire, Sales & Marketing Manager for Southeast Mass and RI, ARS Restoration Specialists.

Bring your questions. This session will be interactive as presenters are very interested in addressing questions and problems specific to your sites' needs and experiences.
