NAHMA received the following message from the Office of Multifamily Housing DAS, Ben Metcalf, regarding an Energy Literacy Webinar scheduled for October 30th. To learn more about this webinar and access to registration, please see the message below:

Dear Multifamily Housing Partners:

October is Energy Awareness Month. To commemorate this, on October 30th, HUD and its federal partners, the U.S. Departments of Energy and Education, are launching the first of an 8-part energy literacy Webinar series entitled "Energy is EveryWhere!" The first Webinar will be an introduction to the concept of energy literacy and is geared towards subsidized housing staff who work with residents. Please share this announcement with your resident services staff and other partners or staff who may be interested. For more information and to register, please view the invitation below.
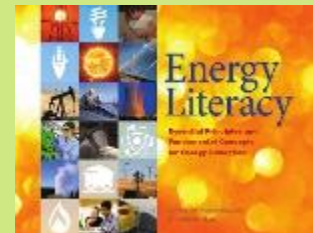

For questions, please contact Dina.Lehmann-Kim@hud.gov.

"Energy Is Everywhere!" Webinar Series: What is Energy Literacy?

Join us for a Webinar on October 30

October is Energy Action Month. To commemorate this, the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and two of its Federal partners, the U.S. Departments of Energy and Education are launching a series of eight energy literacy webinars entitled "Energy Is EveryWhere!"

The first webinar, What is Energy Literacy?, will provide expert presentations that:
• Describe what it means to be energy literate;
• Provide information about the work that HUD, the Department of Energy, and the Department of Education are doing to promote energy literacy;
• Describe easy-to-use resources that public and assisted housing residents can access to learn more about how to conserve energy; and
• Q&A – your chance to ask the experts all things energy related!

Register today!

Stay tuned: additional webinars will be announced soon!
